ABOUT THE ASSOCIATION

The International Geosynthetic Society (IGS) is a not-for-profit organisation which was founded in Paris in 1983, by a group of geotechnical engineers and textile specialists. The Society brings together individual and corporate members from all parts of the world, who are involved in the design, manufacture, sale, use or testing of geotextiles, geomembranes, related products and associated technologies, or who teach or conduct research about such products.

Membership of IGS is primarily organised through Chapters. There are currently 47 regional chapters with over 3,000 individual members and over 600 student members. Most individual members (94%) belong to the IGS through regional Chapters. The IGS has 138 corporate members and 8 premium corporate members.

The Australasian Chapter was established in 2002. It is a not-for-profit organisation which relies on the support and contribution from its members. The board and committee members volunteer their time and support and are committed to supporting the objectives of the society and its members.

Chapter participation allows members to be informed about, and participate in, local and regional activities in addition to providing access to the resources and international dimensions of the IGS.
